Manuel María González-Gordon in his book ‘Jerez-Xérès-Sherish’

THE 2021 TÍO PEPE FINOS PALMAS COLLECTION

We could think of the 2021 Finos Palmas as the restoration selection. Normality gradually returning in the face of the pandemic, a scenario that gives a glimpse of hope. The 2020/21 growing year was very unusual, prolonging the cycle of rainfall deficit that has been affecting our DO. By the end of the year, 27% less rain had fallen, just 417 l/m², way below the historical average of 600 l/m². The rain was concentrated in the autumn and winter, whilst spring was very dry. Both winter and summer were marked by waves of cold and heat in January and August respectively. Nonetheless, the special construction and orientation of our wineries meant that our yeast developed unhindered and remained active all year.

This year we had the invaluable help, and passion, of Olly Smith, well-known wine specialist, columnist and writer and presenter of one of BBC1’s most popular programmes, “Saturday Kitchen” and “A glass with.” He experienced the work in the winery with us and the process of selecting the wines directly from barrel. The team that made the final selection was, as usual, comprised of members of the fifth generation of the González family, including our vice-chairman Pedro Rebuelta González and my own daughter Silvia. The 2021 Finos Palmas collection represents the purity and style of González Byass, and expresses how our most emblematic wine, Tío Pepe, develops. It encapsulates the consistency, splendour and decline of the Flor. A masterclass in biological ageing that culminates in a very old Amontillado: our Tío Pepe Cuatro Palmas, which encapsulates the best of our land and our winery – a wine that is a legend.

CUATRO PALMAS

Complex, intense and sharp. Time and the winery have turned this Very Old Amontillado into a “handkerchief wine” (from the old custom of sprinkling a couple of drops of one of the most aromatic, heady Amontillados or Olorosos onto a handkerchief), a perfume from Jerez. Just one butt was selected, No.3, ageing in the La Constancia Solera Museum before being released.

TASTING NOTE

Butt no. 3 is evocative of grandeur, of a cult wine: Cuatro Palmas. Aromas of an antique shop in perfect harmony with spices and vanilla-like touches that make this wine a perfume in its own right.

PAIRING

A wine that requires nothing other than time to be able to be enjoyed. Sure to enrich any great delicacy. Pure concentration that enhances everything.
